PRINCIPAL'S INTERVIEW

"Leading with Vision, Inspiring with Purpose"

01 You have been teaching and collaborating within the education system for a long time. What changes in student aspirations and perspectives have you observed over the past decade?

Students today are more aware, ambitious, and globally connected than ever before. They seek purpose alongside success and want their learning to have relevance and impact beyond the classroom.

02 If you could inspire students with one life principle, what would it be?

Never stop being a learner. The world belongs not to those who know the most, but to those who are willing to learn, unlearn, and relearn

03 What advice would you give to students who are afraid to start something new?

Do not wait for confidence to arrive before you begin. Confidence is not the starting point; it is the result of taking the first step. Every achievement once began as an uncertain attempt.

04 Where do you see our school five years from now in terms of holistic development?

I envision a school where every child is known not only for academic achievement but also for character, creativity, leadership, and social responsibility. Success will be measured by the quality of human beings we nurture.

05 In an increasingly competitive world, how can students maintain individuality while striving for excellence?

Excellence should never mean becoming a copy of someone else. Compete with your previous self, not with everyone around you. Your uniqueness is your greatest strength.

06 What message would you like to leave for students preparing to enter an increasingly unpredictable world?

The future may be uncertain, but your values, resilience, and ability to learn will always remain your strongest anchors. Prepare not just for a career, but for a lifetime of growth.

07 As the world undergoes rapid political, technological, and social change, how do you believe schools must adapt to prepare students for the future?

Schools must move beyond teaching answers and focus on developing thinkers, problem-solvers, collaborators, and ethical leaders. The future will reward adaptability more than memorization.

08 How can schools ensure that students remain motivated even in the face of failures or setbacks?

By creating an environment where effort is celebrated, mistakes are viewed as opportunities to learn, and every student knows that their worth is not defined by a single result. Motivation grows when students feel supported, challenged, and valued.

WHEN THE CLASSROOM EXTENDS INTO THE ENVIRONMENT

MS. KUSUM SHARMA

IGCSE ENGLISH FACILITATOR

What if learning didn't stay stuck in a desk? One morning our class activity barely left the school corridor. A student stopped at a dripping tap and asked, "Shouldn't we turn that off?" No worksheet told him to ask. No one instructed him. But right there, learning got real. We turned off the tap, and something bigger switched on- awareness.

When classrooms move outside, students start noticing things. Overflowing bins. Dry plants. Messy common areas. They stop waiting for instructions and start fixing stuff. Picking up litter becomes a habit, not a punishment. Writing about it means more because it actually happened to them. You see confidence grow when a kid suggests a solution instead of just asking "what now?"

Books matter, but the world teaches better. When learning steps out, it sticks. And teachers learn too, that real teaching is about responsibility, not just obedience.

GLYPH SAYS:
Sometimes the smallest questions teach the biggest lessons.

VOICES FROM THE CORRIDOR

"The corridor watched us grow before we even knew we were changing"

If the corridors could talk, would it tell us about all those moments where we felt pride, confused, sleepy and most importantly those moments where we thought no one saw us slip and fall? Corridors are not just hallways which students use to get to their classes but rather a place where the walls have a million stories to tell. They are spaces where mixed emotions lingers and voices exist without being heard. Sometimes these narrow places are a racetrack with echoes of footsteps and laughter carrying fragments of conversations, while sometimes uniforms are adjusted and words are carefully chosen. The corridor becomes a place where emotions go unnoticed, just like the people who walk its length every day.

As we grow, the corridor gets filled with stories-first friendships, silent regret during exams and laughter which echoes long after the bell rings. Each year the students change, but the corridor still remembers every version of us, the nervous beginner, the confident dreamers and those who are still figuring things out. It hears whispers between classes and fear behind hollow smiles. The corridors which once felt endless now feel nostalgic as if it had collected abundant bedtime stories to tell its children.

सुबह की पहली किरण

सुबह की सुनहरी किरणों संग नए अरमान जागते हैं,
सोए हुए ख्वाब दिल के आँगन में फिर मुस्कुराते हैं।
जिंदगी हर रोज एक नई दास्तान लिखती है,
टूटी उम्मीदों में भी नई रोशनी दिखती है।
हर पन्ने में छिपी होती है संघर्षों की कहानी,
हर ठोकर सिखा जाती है हिम्मत की नई निशानी।
राहों में चाहे कितने भी तूफान क्यों न आएँ,
सच्चे हौंसले मंजिल तक अपना रास्ता बना जाएँ।
हम सबके भीतर एक चमकता सितारा रहता है,
उम्मीद का दीप हर अंधेरे में जलता रहता है,
सपनों की उड़ान से डर भी छोटा पड़ जाता है,
हर नया प्रयास हमें और मजबूत बना जाता है।
नई सोच, नए अवसर, नया सवेरा लाना है,
प्यार और विश्वास से बेहतर कल सजाना हैं।
कदम से कदम मिलाकर जब सब साथ चलेंगे,
धरती पर खुशियों के नए फूल फिर खिलेंगे।

मेरी आकांक्षा

मैं बनूं प्रकाश की किरण
हर मन में आशा भर जाऊँ।
ज्ञान, प्रेम और सत्य की राह पर,
जीवन अपना सफल बनाऊँ।

मेरी आकांक्षा ऊँची हो,
पर मन में अभिमान न आए।
सबके दुःख में साथ निभाऊँ
कोई भी आँसू न रह जाए।

देश का नाम सदा ऊँचा हो,
ऐसी कुछ कर दिखलाऊँ।
मेहनत, साहस और कर्म से,
नित्य नई सफलता पाऊँ।

ईश्वर से है यही प्रार्थना,
सद्गुणों से भर जाए जीवन।
मेरी हर छोटी-सी आकांक्षा,
मानवता के काम में आए।

INFINITE

I am a force still becoming, A part of nature's quiet abyss.
I am the warmth fueled in each shiver,
Everybody's pain, everybody's bliss.
I am the sea, the earth, the stars,
The powers weaved into a mess intricate.
I am the sky, power of every storm that has ever been.
For I am nothing... but infinite.

MASK OF SMILE

They were broke,
For, in the world full of noises, they used to choke.
They were alone in every crowd,
And silent, amidst words that were too loud.

If we look closely,
The ones who are damaged
Are those who went through so much but still managed.

A shattered person is not always found crying,
Sometimes they are found in the crowd, laughing and lying.
People who laugh the most,
Are the ones who are emotionally drained and lost.

The ones who are seen as bold,
Little do you know when they actually hold.
Once you hold them in your arm,
They will cry with no calm.

FINDING OURSELVES IN THE 'NOISE'

In this fast-paced world, it's easy to get lost in the rush of deadlines, expectations, chasing trends. We get so caught up in fitting in, chasing grades, and meeting others' standards that we forget to pause and ask what we truly value, and where our strengths lie. Discovering ourselves starts with small, intentional choices—taking time to reflect without distractions, trying things that challenge us, speaking up even when we're unsure, and learning from failure without shame. When we make that effort, something shifts. That shift makes us more confident, more patient with ourselves, and clearer about the path we want to follow. We stop living by following others and start living with purpose. Once we understand who we are beyond scores, labels, and outside opinions, we can build a future that's truly our own.

Aarav Bhandari

THE HORIZON OF TOMORROW

A blank page turns, a brand new slate,
A classroom filled with changing fate.
New desks, new faces, steps untrod,
A path of growth where dreamers nod.
The doubts of yesterday take flight,
As morning brings a softer light.
With every challenge we will face,
We'll find our strength and find our place.
For every start is like a seed,
To grow, to learn, to take the lead.
With hope inside, we step right through,
To build a better tomorrow, bright and new.

Yashasvi Tyagi, VIII-B

MOONCHILD

The silence falls on me like snow.
I wonder where I will go.
Feet in the sand, eyes on the sky,
The night shines bright like a firefly.

Shimmer of the moon on the sea.
I wonder where life will take me.
Unpredictable destination, unrestrained ride,
Melodies of the future sing, "Go, Moonchild."
